To: Central Asia Barometer

To: Whom it May Concern.

I am pleased that we are moving ahead with our fruitful cooperation with Central Asia Barometer (CAB), regional applied social sciences research and analytics center. CAB has provided D3 with a unique and high value stream of data since 2016. This has enabled us to expand our knowledge of the region, using general population surveys which are based on sound scientific principles of data collection.

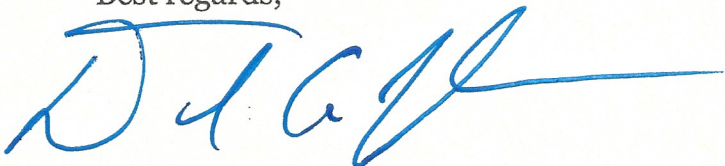

We are looking forward for a new subscription with two more waves of the multi-country public opinion surveys in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, with a potential return to Turkmenistan after the pandemic has receded.

Just as importantly to D3, the entire CAB team have been responsive to our thoughts and concerns about how sample frames are built, how samples are practically drawn, how field (F2F up to the pandemic) is managed and how data quality is evaluated.

The CAB's ability to rapidly move from F2F to CATI across the region has been impressive and a game saver.

Thanks for being proactive, but also for responding constructively to our initiatives. Working with Central Asia Barometer has been a great experience, one which we have together both expanded and improved in a number of ways. We are looking forward to a continuing association across the region as new opportunities arise.

Best regards,
